"GET OFF YOUR ROCKERS!"

GRAY PANTHERS' LEADER COMING TO UNIVERSITY OF LOWELL

Lowell, Mass. - Maggie Kuhn, leader of the Gray Panthers, will speak at the University of Lowell, Wednesday, May 2. This "Day To Celebrate Maturity" is sponsored by the University of Lowell's Gerontology Resource Center, Elder Services of the Merrimack Valley, and the Consultation and Education Service at Solomon Mental Health Center.

Maggie Kuhn will speak at 2:00 P.M. in Durgin Hall, located at Pawtucket and Wilder Streets, Lowell. Admission is free for elders and students, and the public is invited to attend.

The Gray Panthers is a national activist group of older and younger persons working for equal opportunity for people of all ages. Maggie Kuhn, 74 years old, founded the organization in 1970, and it has grown to include thousands of members. Among their concerns are health care programs, mass transportation, housing, and age discrimination in employment. Currently, the elderly comprise 10.7% of the country's population and this figure is expected to reach 20% within 50 years.

In addition to her work with the Gray Panthers, Maggie Kuhn worked closely with the Retired Professional Action Group organized by Ralph Nader. She is presently working on a new book about aging entitled, Nothing To Lose.
